

Old Documents, New Technology: Using Interactive Whiteboards to Explore Primary Sources

A 5-day workshop for teachers:
July 18-22, 2011, 8:00 to 3:30 @
the Vermont History Museum &
Dept of Education in Montpelier.

$550 with 3 graduate credits from St. Michael's College

For the summer workshop, participants should have access to a laptop computer and appropriate whiteboard software. Ideally, participants should have access to a SMART board or Promethean board at school in order to use the skills learned during the workshop.

In this course, you will:

- Learn how interactive whiteboards provide an engaging methodology for students to analyze primary source documents and images
- Analyze primary sources from the Library of Congress and Vermont Historical Society
- Use primary sources to develop interactive whiteboard lessons for your classroom
- Collaborate with colleagues to share ideas, strategies and lessons

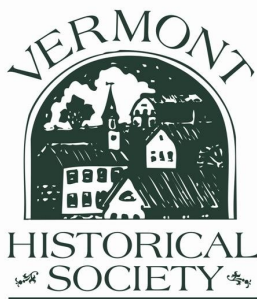

Instructors:

Victoria Hughes, Vermont history educator, Vermont Historical Society

Liz LeBrun, history teacher, Poultney High School

Sigrid Lumbra, Learning Network of Vermont Coordinator, Department of Education

Explore the potential for using interactive whiteboard technology in K-12 classrooms with a focus on US and Vermont history.
